

So Prince William and Kate Middleton are finally getting wed. Part of me is so envious of them, I love weddings and wish I could go back and do mine all over again. But then there is another part of me that wouldn't wish planning their wedding on my worst enemy. Whilst this is most young girls' dream, I anticipate that there are going to be quite a few elements which Kate has very little control over! And then there is the stress! I'm quite happy to admit there was the odd occasion during the planning of mine when I wanted to leave the country!

One issue I had was with my hubby-to-be. Being a chef he was obviously quite determined that the food had to be perfect and many long evenings were spent ripping apart wedding menus from potential venues. Fortunately we eventually chose a venue which allowed us to write the menu ourselves so we settled on smoked salmon for starter, beef for main and raspberry and basil crème brulee for pud - sounds unusual but is actually delicious!

We were so grateful for our hotel being so flexible as so many weren't. This is one of the most important days of your life, so, if you're anything like me, you want it to be perfect! So many venues gave us a selection of menus for all different types of budget, but weren't prepared to budge on sometimes the smallest things. Our hotel allowed us to completely write our menu, bring in our own wine, bring in a hog roast for the evening from the local butcher, and even helped repair our cake when it threatened to collapse before we'd even sat down! Had I not had so much flexibility and support, I'm sure it wouldn't have been the wonderful day it was!

Here at Knife & Fork we are equally as keen to be as flexible and accommodating as possible when it comes to catering. We supply menus but we also offer a bespoke service, so customers can come in and request whatever their hearts desire.....within reason! We want our customers to go away happy, and to tell all their friends what a good job we did, and we believe this lies in flexibility, going above and beyond....oh and of course providing delicious food!
